

This is a man's store. Our study is man-kind.

Now if you want to be kind to the man, don't inflict a cravat on him that he wears with a shudder.

Come and let us discuss his taste and together we can pick out the colors that he'll enjoy—the same with everything for men's wear.

Here is a store full of Christmas gifts that he will appreciate.

Senator Root, who recently was awarded the Nobel peace prize, would need to bring all his powers of peace to bear were he to become the candidate of the Republican party for president of the United States. Indeed, it is extremely doubtful whether Root, strong and capable man that he is, would be able to placate the warring factions of a former great political party.

Every person whose property is burned by the English suffragettes must become an implacable enemy of the "votes for women" cause; and many properties, even of private citizens, are being burned. The inference, therefore, is that the suffragettes are alienating more support than they are gaining in publicity by

The Successful Saver

To be a successful saver one must set aside a certain portion of his earnings each week or month, and see that it is placed where he cannot lay his hands on it for every whim and fancy. The People's National Bank offers the successful plan. The money is yours and can be withdrawn, with interest, at any time, by presenting your passbook at the bank. Before doing this you will have time to think, and your savings account will not be sacrificed unless absolutely necessary.

One dollar will open an account.

their lawless actions. Probably the leaders of the English cause couldn't stop their followers now even if they should care to stop them, which of itself is to be doubted. The flood of passion has gone beyond their control.

COASTING REGULATIONS.

The season for snow coasting having arrived, albeit the covering of the earth is very thin, more than the usual attention ought to be paid to proper regulation of the sport in the larger communities in order to avert tragic results. Those communities ought to designate certain streets on which there shall be coasting and restrict the coasting to those streets; moreover, the fact that such streets have been designed should be published enough times so that the public may get the idea fastened in mind to permit drivers of automobiles and horses, as well as pedestrians, to take reasonable precautions when approaching the sliding places. An accident in Middlebury on Monday evening, in which several girls were seriously injured, was due to the effort of a party of coasters to avoid hitting a team which approached unawares, the double-runner sled being steered into a tree and the occupants being hurled off with great force. If the street on which they were coasting had been formally set apart for the purpose and the public had been sufficiently warned of such fact, it is not likely that an accident of that nature would have occurred. Unregulated coasting on any street that the young people see fit to select for their sport is bound to result in serious accidents, oftentimes in fatal injury to some of the participants. Therefore, it is none too early to adopt reasonable regulations for the restriction of the sliding. It is the duty of every community in which the population and the daily activity are sufficient to warrant it.

ATTACKED BY THE "PUBLICITY BUG."

It is becoming evident that the papers of New York City are giving too much publicity to the affairs in which girls and young women are participants, for the publicity which has been accorded some of the subjects in real events has so appealed to girls of weak and shallow mentality that they too are striving to do something bizarre so that their names and perhaps their pictures may get into the newspapers. For example, a young woman, hardly more than a girl, created a scene on the street of the city by making the claim that she had been attacked by a man, and her outcry caused the police to arrest the man as her alleged assailant. No sooner had the girl been taken to the police station and taken before the inquisitors than she began to show signs of being afflicted with the "publicity bug." She even became anxious over the possibility that the newspapers might skip her, an anxiety which vanished when the reporters appeared in the police station in their daily rounds after the happenings of the day. To the reporters this girl narrated the alleged facts of the alleged attack and then brazenly suggested that she had a picture of herself at home if they (the reporters) thought it would go well with the story which she was unfolding to them; but even if they didn't consider the picture an essential feature, then there was the story. Naturally enough, the reporters, as well as the investigating authorities, treated the case rather lightly after that, but apparently the occurrence has not been enough to stop the multiplication of these "stories" which are but the outgrowth of a well-developed imagination. The way to stop it is to reduce the publicity accorded all cases of this character.

CURRENT COMMENT

The Small Electric Plant.

The small central station in Windsor, Vt., is particularly instructive as representing conditions totally different from those existing in ordinary central-station practice and yet typical of many electrical developments which are of large service to the community.

A little town with a few small industries and a population of a progressive turn of mind is by no means to be despised as a market for electricity. A plan in such a place cannot be "floated" with any advantage to the promoters, but it nevertheless may be made a paying investment, as this one seems to have been through persistent effort and economical administration. The whole plant is an example of intelligent development of a small field to the great advantage of the community and on a basis that has now become a paying one. A plant under similar conditions, but with the advantage of being erected as a whole simultaneously, instead of being developed from one which had skidded out a precarious existence for a number of years previously, could probably turn out energy more economically, but it could scarcely be able in so small a place to secure a materially larger volume of business.

There are scores or even hundreds of little places with available small water powers which might well profit by the example of Windsor. Such enterprises intelligently administered can be made good investments on a small scale and deserve far more attention than they have yet received. — Electrical World.

JINGLES AND JESTS

Wellington as a Shot.

"The hero of Waterloo," says Lady Frances Shelley in her "Diary," "was a very wild shot," and goes on to tell what happened once at Maresfield, where he was visiting her.

"After wounding a retriever early in the day and later on peppering the keeper's gaiters he inadvertently sprinkled the bare arms of an old woman who chanced to be washing clothes at her cottage window."

"I was attracted by her screams. . . . took in the situation at a glance and went to the cottage door."

"I'm wounded, my lady!" she cried. "My good woman," said I, "this ought to be the proudest moment of your life! You have had the distinction of being shot by the great duke."

Ma Was Different.

A boy wrote a composition on the subject of the Quakers, whom he described as a sect who never quarreled, never got into a fight, never clawed each other and never jawed back. The production contained a postscript in these words:

"Pa's a Quaker, but ma isn't."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

His Ambition.

"To think," said the prison visitor, "that you will have to go through life as an ex-convict!"

"Well, miss," replied Crowbar Claude, "to tell you the truth, just at present there ain't nothing I'd like more to be." —Exchange.

Her Only Mood.

Inquisitive Friend—Don't you find that your wife is very subject to moods? Enpeeck—No; she has only one mood, the imperative, and I'm the one that's subject to that.—Judge.

Shut Her Off.

First Deaf Mute (making signs)—Did your wife complain because you stayed out till after midnight? Second Deaf Mute (chuckling)—Did she? You should have seen her! But when it began to get monotonous I just turned out the light.

Fox Hunting.

In communities where fox hunting is considered a sport catching one is the cardinal offense. The rule in fox hunting is that you may chase the quarry, but you must not overtake it.—Philadelphia Ledger.
